PROGRAM

Symphonic Concert March

G. Bonelli, arr. N. Falcone

The Italian Symphonic Marches are based chiefly on flowing melodies, contrapuntal material and contrasting rhythms. Bonelli has employed leitmotifs which reappear often through the composition. The finale once again returns to the motive of the introduction in resplendent form.

Beatrice and Benedict Overture

Hector Berlioz, arr. Henning

This overture consists of three sections contrasting comedy and romance. The first is light and gay in character, followed by a slow sustained section. The third and largest section is fast, using thematic material from the opening.

Suite for Band

Alan Hovhaness

- | | |
|------------------|------------------|
| I. Aria | IV. Canzona |
| II. Processional | V. Aria |
| III. Aria | VI. Processional |

A series of solemn festival pieces in religious style - sometimes of Armenian character, sometimes of Renaissance spirit. The music is an evocation of pageantry and splendor.

Variants on a Mediaeval Tune

Norman Dello Joio

"In dulci jubilo" is the melody used as the theme for this set of variations. The work opens with a brief introduction followed by the theme. Five variations, contrasting in tempo and character, utilize the possibilities of the band to the highest degree.

INTERMISSION

The Corcoran Cadets - March

John Philip Sousa

One of Sousa's lesser-known marches, "Corcoran Cadets" was composed for a Washington, D.C. military unit and originally titled "The March-Past of the Corcoran Cadets".

Symphony No. 6 for Band

Vincent Persichetti

- I. Adagio - Allegro
- II. Adagio sostenuto
- III. Allegretto
- IV. Vivace

The Symphony No. 6 for Band was composed in the winter of 1955-56 on commission from the Washington University Chamber Band. The first movement's opening Adagio contains important thematic material that leads to the statement marked Allegro. A hymn taken from Persichetti's "Hymns and Responses for the Church Year," 'Round Me Falls the Night', is the basis for the second movement. The contrasting Allegretto third movement is followed by a breath-taking Vivace finale.

Pineapple Poll - Suite from the Ballet

Arthur Sullivan, Mackerras

- I. Opening Number
- II. Jasper's Dance
- III. Poll's Dance
- IV. Finale

"Pineapple Poll" is a ballet composed by Charles Mackerras based on music of Sir Arthur Sullivan. These four excerpts from the ballet were scored for band by W. J. Duthoit.
