

There are so many things I could talk about in the pandemic, but the other day I thought, hey why not try something less dreary than about people refusing to wear masks etc. I have found that in this pandemic, people have found a new creative way to express themselves, through the masks they wear over their face. Yes the masks are required during this pandemic, however you can have whatever you want on the mask. Over my entire COVID-19 experience I have worked as a grocery store worker, a warehouse worker, and a fast food worker. In all the occasions I have seen a lot of different kinds of masks. The vibrant and colorful ones are the ones I find the most enjoyable, they bring a small spark of happiness to a rather dreary day at work.

Those are some of the masks that are kind of colorful. There are a lot of really cool bright and colorful masks out there. there's also masks that make you stop and think for a bit. Another one of my favorites is the ones with contextual jokes on them. The jokes that you either laugh at, and find super funny, or that have you sit there wondering what you missed.

Masks have become like billboards that you can carry around with you. You are your own advertisement, whether you want something political, vibrant, funny on it. The major factor is its your choice what you put on your face, I have usually chosen grey tones or stuff like that. But some days I like to take out my bright and colorful masks, because I know that it makes a difference in other peoples days.
